

Early County Directories

County directories provide genealogists and historians with a wealth of information. That's why Glen Phillips is pleased to offer this impressive collection of 43 county directories reproduced from The Farmers Directory for All Counties in Ontario, 1890. Each county section has been copied in its entirety from the original directory and is presented in booklet form (comb binding, cardstock cover, 8½" x11").

Data from the county directories will prove invaluable to researchers. Most significantly, each directory lists thousands upon thousands of farmers (and farmers only), their addresses by township lot and concession, and their local postal offices. Additionally, the directories indicate whether farmers owned or rented their land ("f" for freeholders or "t" for tenants). A sample of a page excerpt appears to the left. This kind of information is extremely helpful for discovering your family history and conducting historical research. Indeed, the 1890 date has particular utility in developing effective search strategies for consulting the 1891 Canadian Census (a census, it should be noted, for which Ontario's county returns have yet to be indexed to any significant degree). Finally, this collection is growing and now also includes two pre-Confederation Ontario county directories and one English city directory.

All told, these directories are ideal research sources for genealogists, historians, librarians, archivists, and museum professionals. Enhance your reference library by ordering today! The order form appears at the end of this catalogue.
